

Limestone Fiscal Corp. v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1944-284

A taxpayer who elects to use percentage depletion cannot claim a cost depletion deduction for net operating loss carryover purposes if the percentage depletion deduction was zero due to the net income limitation.

Summary

Limestone Fiscal Corp. sought to deduct cost depletion when calculating its net operating loss carryover, despite having elected to use percentage depletion and receiving a zero deduction due to the 50% net income limitation. The Tax Court held that Section 122(d)(1) is a limitation on the percentage depletion deduction, not a grant of a cost depletion deduction, and therefore the taxpayer could not deduct cost depletion in this scenario.

Facts

The petitioner, Limestone Fiscal Corp., a California corporation engaged in mining gold, elected to claim depletion using the percentage of income method in 1935. In 1940, the petitioner sustained a net operating loss of $32,639.57, excluding any depletion deduction. Due to having a net loss from the property, its percentage depletion deduction was zero because percentage depletion
